SATURDAY MORNING, DEC 13, 1862

Simplicity not Foolishness

Under the head of "Apothegms from the President's Message," we notice some of the most obscure passages from Mr Lincoln's last communication to Congress, going the rounds of the California papers It is intended by this, to hold out the idea that if these are to be taken as specimens of Mr Lincoln's sententiousness, what must the lighter part of his message be?—if his most serious efforts are laughable, his less pretentious writings must be absurd. It is by this manner of representing things, that it is hoped to bring in to ridicule the honest patriotic and practical purposes of the President

Mr. Lincoln says, "we cannot escape history;" "we shall be famous or infamous in spite of ourselves" "Why," says a smart fellow, "every fool knows that That is true; but the trouble is that every fool will not act by the light of these truisms, and it is particularly the smart fellows, like those who talk this way, that are so foolish or so mean as to neglect the execution of important duties. It is just because men forget that they are doing important things, that they need to be reminded of the magnitude of their responsibilities. When men appear careless of the verdict of posterity, they should be reminded that there is no escaping it, and that truism which calls men back to the gravity of their actions, should deserve the title of "apothegm" in its best signification.

It is the case with exceedingly earnest men that they frequently utter sayings, which are in common use, with an emphasis which would lead their auditors to think that the speaker supposed them to be ignorant of them, when, in fact, it is because they are apposite, and yet appear to be scoffed at, that they are used at all. Exceedingly able men are noted for simplicity. The first Napoleon would manifest the most child like curiosity when any novelty was presented to his view In his military addresses, he published to his soldiers military truisms, clothed in new and often gorgeous language. Yet, they were really nothing more than ideas which had been a thousand times expressed, and which can never become old—which will never fail to stir the soldier's heart, however often they may be repeated. In the same way, Mr Lincoln has used many sayings which are trite, but which are appropriate to the times, and ought to be heeded by Congress

Boise Mines.—Below we give some extracts from a private letter, from a miner in the Placer District, Boise mines, to a gentleman at Auburn. The original letter was forwarded from thence to this place, and is placed at our disposal It is dated November 20th, 1862.

"What I have to say, in regard to these mines, I hope you will take with due allowance for the fallibility of human judgment. Daly and McReynolds did not remain here long enough to gain a proper understanding of these mines, and I therefore ask you to judge their statements and mine with a recollection of the fact, that I have staid here long enough to satisfy myself thoroughly about them. Although I have not been here long, and have not, as yet, found anything rich, I pronounce these mines good, and when we have proper facilities for working them, they will be found capable of sustaining as large a population as any mining district on the Pacific Coast. If Daly had remained here until the present time, I am sure that he would have changed his mind in relation to the mines. I have known a miner to pack dirt in a sack a considerable distance, and make as high as nine ounces a day. The mining discoveries already cover more than the area of Florence district, and new discoveries are made almost daily."

We have had a lengthy conversation on the subject of these mines with Marion Moore, Councilman for the Shoshone district in Washington Territory. Mr Moore's opinions and observations are entitled to especial weight, from the fact of his being an operative miner, and one of the least excitable of men. He says that the discoveries, so far, are confined to the flowage of the north side of the Boise river, drained by Grimes creek and its tributaries. To the east, the mountains rise in broken, ragged masses, and to the north, the hills which form the basin of Grimes' creek, are swept at the base by the Payette river. To the south, in the forks of Boise river, there is a steep mountain ridge, and beyond it the country falls off into a district resembling that on Grimes' creek, but it has never been explored. In addition to unusually rich deposits in the creek beds of Grimes' creek and its tributaries, there is a large extent of ground of that character known as "gravel points," by Californians These deposits are extensive and good prospects have been found in them They are from two or three to twenty or thirty feet in depth, and have good fall in most cases, to the creeks below. The gist of Mr Moore's expressed opinion is, that there is a large mining district at Boise, as good or better than any yet discovered, except Florence, and superior as to climate and facilities for working.

California has, by the last census 67,000 more males than females

Miscellaneous Paragraphs.

There were eleven persons confined in the Sacramento jail on the 4th [illegible] under [illegible] for murder

Definition of a gentleman—One who pays for his paper What beauty and simplicity—how brief and how comprehensive!

The Missouri Republican states that Gen Sterling Price is heartily sick of the rebellion and if an opportunity presented itself would return to his allegiance and the Union

At the battle at Corinth one of the rebel regiments had a black flag for its color The color bearer was riddled with balls. The use of this piratical emblem was simply disgraceful

Mr Cameron Minister to Russia says that the rebels are building iron clad ships in England There is no doubt that this is true, and that it is done under the patronage of the British Government

The New Orleans Picayune of the 20th of October says that the day before 11 [illegible] bales of cotton were sold at auction in the levee at prices ranging from 58 to 68 cents per pound

The pirate Alabama has made many captures of American vessels which were insured with English companies The 290 British merchants who rigged out this craft must feel rather small about it It is another case of the "poisoned chalice" being returned to the lips of the poisoner

It is ascertained from a New Granadian official source that the Government has interposed no objection to free black emigration to that Republic, the policy being to encourage the settlement of the country by those qualified to develop her agricultural and mineral resources

The San Francisco authorities are making energetic efforts to break up gambling in that city Thirty six sporting men have been indicted Three only have been arrested, as the balance have skedaddled The names of the unlucky ones are H. A. Kelly, Robert Edmunds and J. M. Gore

Eight histories of the War are in course of preparation at New York The whole of them will not be worth eight cents It is preposterous to try and write a history of such a struggle while it is still pending In fact, the materials representing both sides of the case cannot be gathered

A correspondent of the Diario, of Havana, says that the Federal Generals in order to get to Richmond, have only to cross Longstreet, pass over a Hill, and throw down a Stonewall, and, until they can overcome these general inconveniences, there is no hope of their conquering the South

Two Games of Brag.—During the late canvass in New York John Van Buren made himself very offensive to the personal friends of Gen Wadsworth One of them, Count Alexis Gurowski,—formerly in the Russian service and the author of an analysis of Russian institutions and government—feeling much aggrieved, challenged him to mortal combat He says to Mr Van Buren that he will not do him the honor to spit in his face, but will fight him any time place and manner. If his challenge was not answered in ten days, he threatened to publish it Mr Van Buren anticipated him by sending the document to the New York Herald, and there the matter rested. About this time, Maj Gen. Cassius M Clay was very active in New York politics, and had been on the verge of various fights, without getting into any A Mr Birdsall, thinking the chances were open for him to get a fighting reputation, took it into his head to denounce Cassius as "a liar, coward and poltroon," expecting, of course, that Mr Clay would not fight, as he had publicly declared—on the occasion of killing Wickliffe in a duel—that he would never go out again But to Mr. Birdsall's surprise he received a challenge, signed "Cassius M Clay" Here was a dilemma All at once it occurred to him that Clay had killed two men and wounded several others An officious friend, having told him of the desperate and fatal affray between Clay and the Turners, which was really a horrible affair Mr Birdsall's fears increased In addition to abusing Clay, he had expressed his willingness to meet him in single combat. The only way open was to follow Van Buren's lead—he published Clay's challenge, and declined to fight—assigning several reasons, which were false, and neglecting to mention the true one—cowardice But the cream of the joke is that Clay never sent the challenge—never heard of Mr Birdsall's abuse of his character—in fact, did not know there was such a man in the world as Birdsall Some wag, knowing Birdsall's weakness, had forged the hostile note

Seymour's Position.—The Governor elect of New York was called upon to make a speech at Utica, on the 6th of November In his speech the following passage occurs

Henceforth the laws were to be obeyed, and constitutional authority respected The Democracy would offer no opposition to the legal actions of the President It was not their intention to obstruct any constitutional measures of the Administration On the contrary it would be sustained in every constitutional demand for the prosecution of the war There must be no more higher law but only the law of the Federal compact He denied the charge that the Democratic party was not loyal to the Government They opposed the Government only because it failed to fulfill the promises with which it assumed the reins of power

From Olympia.—From a private letter received last evening from a friend in Olympia, we learn that the Council had temporarily organized on Wednesday last, by the selection of Hon Frank Clark as President pro tem It is probable that by this time the Legislative body of Washington Territory has organized permanently and will commence its labors on Monday next in regular order

Subscription to Sanitary Fund.—Before acknowledged, $18,030 50

Wm Stephens, Portland $10 Ladies at Dayton, forwarded by D C Kelly $60 Van Dusen & Brown, Astoria, $20; Ira Lawn Arbor, Polk county J Ball, $5 Dr John Jackson, $5 [illegible] K Delashmutt $5 [illegible] Comegys $2 50—Total—$18 137 50

A HOLBROOK

Gen Lyon.—A writer in the Richmond Examiner thus speaks of Gen Lyon, who was killed at Wilson's Creek

He was an able and dangerous man—a man of the times, who appreciated the force of audacity and quick decision in a revolutionary war. [illegible] he matched vigorous energy and promptitude. No doubts or scruples unsettled his mind [illegible] A Connecticut Yankee, without a trace of chivalric feeling or personal sensibility—[illegible] of those who cannot [illegible] with indifference [illegible] it was this exception [illegible] of the regular army of the United States that he was [illegible] undisguised and fanatical Abolitionist

The statement in regard to Gen. Lyon's lack of sensitiveness in personal matters [illegible] to be false by his acquaintances

Military Force in Canada.—It is said that the military force in Canada is about to be increased by some batteries of artillery and a brigade of infantry Large additions have been recently made to the stores of arms ammunition and materials in the [illegible] depots which are now equal to equipping and maintaining in the field a force of 25 000 men

United States Senator from Indiana.—Hon A Hendricks the Indiana [illegible] Journal declares will probably be the Breckinridge candidate for United States Senator He is a thorough going hater of Yankees and has advocated the secession of the Northwestern States from the Union, with a view of joining the rebel Confederacy

Reduced Fare.—The Opposition line of steamers to New York by the way of Panama have reduced the fare to $100 in the cabin and $40 in the steerage

The Daily Oregonian.

CITY.

The MORNING OREGONIAN has a larger SUBSCRIPTION LIST than any other Daily published in this City.

North Pacific Review.—We are indebted to the publishers of the North Pacific Review for the third number of that sterling Monthly. In point of typography and general arrangement, the North Pacific is a worthy successor of the Pioneer Magazine. The contents are varied and interesting, among which we notice much valuable statistical information. The scope of this review is extensive, and it bids fair to be a success. It is published by Greeley, Dalgleish & Warren. A. Roman & Co., Nos. 417 and 419 Montgomery street, San Francisco, Agents.

Remove the Dirt.—Our attention has been called to the fact that, the dirt thrown out of the cisterns, recently built, is obstructing the crossings of several streets. It is evidently somebody's duty to remove it. If it is the contractors' duty, let them do it, and if the city is to do it, let it be done. Otherwise, we are likely to not have the power to haul or walk through certain streets.

Pan-tecna-theca.—There will be an exhibition of the "Pan tecna-theca at the Willamette Theatre, this afternoon at 2 o clock, for ladies and children. In the evening the exhibition will be open for the public in general.

Good News.—The general tenor of the news from the East, by telegraph and mail, is good and strong. There is to be no going into Winter quarters. Our armies are everywhere moving. In the Southwest the game is our own. Rosecrans' victories and Curtis' and Butler's management secure that section irrevocably to the Union. The great Mississippi and Texas expeditions are progressing finely. The remaining rebel seaports are trembling in anticipation of speedy attacks from our iron-clads. Scarcity and high prices and despondency rule throughout the South. Only in Virginia the enemy appears strong and confident, and is crouching at Fredericksburg and Richmond for his most fearful spring, and if foiled in this, the rebel dog is virtually dead, however it may keep up a spasmodic show of life in his extremities thereafter. In North Carolina, Tennessee and Louisiana the Unionists are preparing to hold Congressional elections, in conjunction with such converted rebels as desire to save what they can of slavery before the Proclamation of Freedom shall go into effect. Foreign recognition is a "played out" idea, and the rebels themselves begin to hate John Bull nearly as much as they hate the "Abolitionists."—There is abundant reason why patriots should look upon the future with hope and confidence.—Marysville Appeal.

Report of the Secretary of War.—The Report of the Secretary of war details the military operations during the past year, says from a survey of the whole field of operations it is apparent that whatever disasters our arms may have suffered at particular points, a great advance has been made since the commencement of the war. The Union forces are now in the field under able commanders, stronger than ever, resolute, and eager to be led against the enemy, to crush the rebellion by a vigorous campaign. The Armies of the Potomac and of the West stand ready to vie with each other in dealing the quickest and heaviest blows against the enemy. Taught by experience of the ruin of inaction and the hazard of delay, a spirit of activity seems now to pervade the force of the United States beyond what has heretofore been exhibited. Under the calls of July and August there are already in the field over four hundred and twenty thousand new troops, of which three hundred and ninety thousand are volunteers. Three hundred and thirty-two thousand of these have volunteered for three years.

White's Fever and Agu-Drops.—For the cure of AGUE, PANAMA FEVER, NEURALGIA and GENERAL DEBILITY.

This Medicine has been used in private practice for many years with great success. Indeed, in no instance has it failed to effect a speedy cure, in Ague especially, one bottle has been found sufficient in most cases, and in none are more than two bottles required.

A great number of testimonials could be given to verify these statements, but the proprietor prefers relying upon the merits of the medicine alone. A cure is guaranteed in nine cases out of ten.

Prepared only by ROBERT WHITE, Chemist and Drug[gist], Main street, Placerville, and Broadway, Upper Placer. For sale by all respectable Druggists throughout the State.

White's Patent Lever Trusses.—These instruments are recommended to the public as the best ever [invented]. The principle is new and different from any other. The Pad works over a Knuckle, giving it a circular, [DOWNWARD] and UPWARD motion, thus being able to support [the rupture] with half the pressure required by other Trusses. The pain consequent upon heavy pressure is thereby avoided.

These instruments will not rust and are the lightest, most [durable] and most cleanly of all others. They can be [washed] at pleasure. Many persons have been cured by [them] of ruptures of several years standing.

Office and Laboratory, No 10, Alder street, Four Doors from Front, Portland, Ogn.

HAVING secured the services of Dr. C. H. MACK, formerly of New York city and late of St Louis, who is an experienced and skillful Dentist, I am now prepared to manufacture and insert Artificial Teeth by the following methods, namely: GOLD, SILVER, RUBBER, AMBER, PORCELAIN BASE, GUM ENAMEL, RUBBER ATTACHMENT, CAPOLITE, CONTINUOUS GUM, MICA and ENAMELED PLATE WORK. Some kinds of this work is recommended above all others, and needs but an inspection to prove its superiority for cleanliness, durability and life-like appearance to any artificial teeth in use.

Filling and cleaning teeth, and all operations in Dental Surgery, either mechanical, operative or surgical, performed in the most thorough and highly finished manner. None but the most permanent and finished operations performed, and no inducements to patients by low priced or roughly finished operations. I use no cement in filling teeth, and seek in price to make no competition with cheap Dentists; and desire the patronage of such persons only as wish their operations performed in the most perfect and skillful manner.

Operations that fail to give satisfaction need not be taken or paid for. Office hours from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M. Indigent persons who are unable to pay full professional charges will call before and after office hours. nov14tf

LADD, WEBSTER & CO'S FAMILY SEWING MACHINES

ARE UNEQUALLED BY ANY FOR BEAUTY AND SIMPLICITY OF CONSTRUCTION
—AND—
Efficiency in Working.

A GOOD SEWING MACHINE

SHOULD BE WELL MADE, simple in its construction and easily kept in order; should make a tight seam alike on both sides of the material, and should sew any and all materials that can be sewed.

It should be able to use cotton thread or silk directly from the spool, and to sew from coarse to fine, and from thick to thin with rapidity and without changing the tension. It should also be able to make the tension greater or less on both the under and upper threads, and with uniformity, and should have a straight needle, curved ones being liable to break.

The needle should have a perpendicular motion—this is absolutely necessary for heavy work.

It should be able to bind with a binder, hem with a hemmer, should stitch, fell, run and gather, and should be always ready to work.

It should be capable of using the same size thread on both sides of the work, and of using different colored thread on the upper or under side to correspond with any colors of cloth to be united.

It should be able to make a long or short stitch, and to fasten off the seam and commence sewing tightly at the first stitch, and to run easily, and make but little noise.

It should have a wheel feed; no others are in constant contact with the work.

It should not be liable to get out of order; neither should it require a screw-driver or wrench to set the needle.

It should not be liable to oil the operator's dress.

It should not form a ridge on the under side nor ravel!

SATURDAY MORNING, DEC 1 1862

Simplicity not Foolishness

Under the head of "Apothegms from the President's Message" we notice some of the most obscure passages from Mr Lincoln's last communication to Congress going the rounds of the California papers It is intended by this, to hold out the idea that if these are to be taken as specimens of Mr Lincoln's sententiousness what must the lighter part of his message be?—if his most serious efforts are laughable, his less pretentious writings must be absurd It is by this manner of representing things, that it is hoped to bring into ridicule the honest patriotic and practical purposes of the President

Mr Lincoln says, "we cannot escape history," "we shall be famous or infamous in spite of ourselves" "Why" says a smart fellow, "every fool knows that" That is true, but the trouble is that every fool will not act by the light of these truisms and it is particularly the smart fellows like those who talk this way, that are so foolish or so mean as to neglect the execution of important duties It is just because men forget that they are doing important things that they need to be reminded of the magnitude of their responsibilities When men appear careless of the verdict of posterity they should be reminded that there is no escaping it and that truism which calls men back to the gravity of their actions, should deserve the title of "apothegm" in its best signification

It is the case with exceedingly earnest men that they frequently utter sayings, which are in common use, with an emphasis which would lead their auditors to think that the speaker supposed them to be ignorant of them when, in fact, it is because they are apposite, and yet appear to be scoffed at, that they are used at all Exceedingly able men are noted for simplicity The first Napoleon would manifest the most child like curiosity when any novelty was presented to his view In his military addresses, he published to his soldiers military truisms, clothed in new and often gorgeous language Yet, they were really nothing more than ideas which had been a thousand times expressed, and which can never become old—which will never fail to stir the soldier's heart, however often they may be repeated In the same way, Mr Lincoln has used many sayings which are true, but which are appropriate to the times, and ought to be heeded by Congress

Boise Mines.—Below we give some extracts from a private letter, from a miner in the Placer District, Boise mines, to a gentleman at Auburn The original letter was forwarded from thence to this place and is placed at our disposal It is dated November 20th, 1862

"What I have to say, in regard to these mines, I hope you will take with due allowance for the fallibility of human judgment Daly and McReynolds did not remain here long enough to gain a proper understanding of these mines, and I therefore ask you to judge their statements and mine with a recollection of the fact, that I have staid here long enough to satisfy myself thoroughly about them. Although I have not been here long, and have not, as yet found anything rich, I pronounce these mines good, and when we have proper facilities for working them, they will be found capable of sustaining as large a population as any mining district on the Pacific Coast If Daly had remained here until the present time, I am sure that he would have changed his mind in relation to the mines. I have known a miner to pack dirt in a sack a considerable distance, and make as high as nine ounces a day The mining discoveries already cover more than the area of Florence district, and new discoveries are made almost daily"

We have had a lengthy conversation on the subject of these mines with Marion Moore, Councilman for the Shoshone district in Washington Territory Mr Moore's opinions and observations are entitled to especial weight, from the fact of his being an operative miner, and one of the least excitable of men He says that the discoveries, so far, are confined to the flowage of the north side of the Boise river, drained by Grimes creek and its tributaries To the east, the mountains rise in broken, ragged masses, and to the north, the hills which form the basin of Grimes' creek, are swept at the base by the Payette river To the south, in the forks of Boise river, there is a steep mountain ridge, and beyond it the country falls off into a district resembling that on Grimes creek but it has never been explored In addition to unusually rich deposits in the creek beds of Grimes' creek and its tributaries there is a large extent of ground of that character known as "gravel points" by Californians. These deposits are extensive and good prospects have been found in them They are from two or three to twenty or thirty feet in depth, and have good fall in most cases to the creeks below The gist of Mr Moore's expressed opinion is that there is a large mining district at Boise as good or better than any yet discovered except Florence and superior as to climate and facilities for working

Eight histories of the War are in course of preparation at New York The whole of them will not be worth eight cents It is preposterous to try and write a history of such a struggle while it is still raging In fact the materials representing both sides of the case cannot be gathered

A correspondent of the [illegible] of Havana says that the Federal Generals in order to get to Richmond have only to cross [illegible] pass over a Hill and [illegible] a Stone wall and until they can overcome these general inconveniences there is no hope of their conquering the South

Two Games of Bluff.—During the late canvass in New York, John Van Buren made himself very offensive to the personal friends of Gen Wadsworth One of them Count Alexis Gurowski—formerly in the Russian service and the author of an analysis of Russian institutions and government—feeling much aggrieved challenged him to mortal combat He says to Mr Van Buren that he will not do him the honor to spit in his face but will fight him any time place and manner If his challenge wasn't answered in ten days, he threatened to publish it Mr Van Buren anticipated him by sending the document to the New York Herald, and there the matter rested About this time, Maj Gen Cassius M Clay was very active in New York politics and had been on the verge of various fights, without getting into any A Mr Birdsall, thinking the chances were open for him to get a fighting reputation took it into his head to denounce Cassius as a liar, coward and poltroon expecting of course, that Mr Clay would not fight as he had publicly declared—on the occasion of killing Wickliffe in a duel—that he would never go out again But to Mr Birdsall's surprise he received a challenge, signed "Cassius M Clay" Here was a dilemma All at once it occurred to him that Clay had killed two men and wounded several others An officious friend having told him of the desperate and fatal affray between Clay and the Turners which was really a horrible affair Mr Birdsall's fears increased In addition to abusing Clay, he had expressed his willingness to meet him in single combat The only way open was to follow Van Buren's lead—he published Clay's challenge, and declined to fight—assigning several reasons, which were false, and neglecting to mention the true one—cowardice But the cream of the joke is that Clay never sent the challenge—never heard of Mr Birdsall's abuse of his character—in fact, did not know there was such a man in the world as Birdsall Some wag knowing Birdsall's weakness had forged the hostile note

Seymour's Position The Governor elect of New York was called upon to make a speech at Utica, on the 6th of November In his speech the following passage occurs

Henceforth the laws were to be obeyed, and constitutional authority respected The Democracy would offer no opposition to the legal actions of the President It was not their intention to obstruct any constitutional measures of the Administration on the contrary it would be sustained in every constitutional demand for the prosecution of the war There must be no more higher law but only the law of the Federal compact He denied the charge that the Democratic party was not loyal to the Government They opposed the Government only because it failed to fulfill the promises with which it assumed the reins of power

From Olympia—From a private letter received last evening from a friend in Olympia we learn that the Council had temporarily organized on Wednesday last, by the selection of Hon Frank Clark as President pro tem It is probable that by this time the Legislative body of Washington Territory has organized permanently and is [illegible] its labors [illegible]

Gen Lyon —A writer in the Richmond Examiner thus speaks of Gen Lyon who was killed at Wilson Creek

He was an able and dangerous man—a man of the times who appreciated the force of audacity and quick [illegible] in a revolutionary war [illegible] military character and talents [illegible] No doubts or scruples unsettled his mind—A Connecticut Yankee without a trace of chivalric feeling or personal sensibility—[illegible] [illegible] the United States that he was [illegible] [illegible]

The statement in regard to Gen [illegible] [illegible] sensitiveness in personal matters [illegible] to be false by his [illegible]

Military Force in Canada —It is said that the military force in Canada [illegible] to be increased by [illegible] [illegible] large [illegible] of infantry [illegible] [illegible]

United States Senator from Indiana —The [illegible] Indianapolis State Journal declares will probably be the [illegible] candidate for United States Senator He is a thorough going hater of Yankees and has advocated the secession of the North western States from the Union with a view of joining the rebel Confederacy

Reduced Fare.—The Opposition line of steamers to New York by the way of Panama has reduced the fare to $100 in the [illegible] [illegible] in the steerage

CITY.

The MORNING OREGONIAN has a larger SUBSCRIPTION LIST than any other Daily published in this City

NORTH PACIFIC REVIEW.—We are indebted to the publishers of the North Pacific Review for the third number of that sterling Monthly. In point of typography and general arrangement, the North Pacific is a worthy successor of the Pioneer Magazine. The contents are varied and interesting, among which we notice much valuable statistical information. The scope of this review is extensive and it bids fair to be a success. It is published by Greeley, Dalgleish & Warren. A. Roman & Co., Nos 417 and 419 Montgomery street San Francisco, Agents.

REMOVE THE DIRT.—Our attention has been called to the fact that the dirt thrown out of the cisterns recently built is obstructing the crossings of several streets. It is evidently somebody's duty to remove it. If it is the contractors duty let them do it, and if the city is to do it, let it be done. Otherwise we are likely to not have the power to haul or walk through certain streets.

PAN TECNA THECA.—There will be an exhibition of the "Pan tecna theca" at the Willamette Theatre this afternoon at 2½ o'clock for ladies and children. In the evening the exhibition will be open for the public in general.

GOOD NEWS.—The general tenor of the news from the East by telegraph and mail is good and strong. There is to be no going into Winter quarters. Our armies are everywhere moving. In the Southwest the game is our own. Rosecrans' victories and Curtis' and Butler's management secure that section irrevocably to the Union. The great Mississippi and Texas expeditions are progressing finely. The remaining rebel seaports are trembling in anticipation of speedy attacks from our iron-clads. Scarcity and high prices and despondency rule throughout the South. Only in Virginia the enemy appears strong and confident, and is crouching at Fredericksburg and Richmond for his most fearful spring, and if foiled in this, the rebel dog is virtually dead, however it may keep up a spasmodic show of life in his extremities thereafter. In North Carolina, Tennessee and Louisiana the Unionists are preparing to hold Congressional elections, in conjunction with such converted rebels as desire to save what they can of slavery before the Proclamation of Freedom shall go into effect. Foreign recognition is a "played out" idea, and the rebels themselves begin to hate John Bull nearly as much as they hate the "Abolitionists."—There is abundant reason why patriots should look upon the future with hope and confidence.—Marysville Appeal.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR.—The Report of the Secretary of war details the military operations during the past year. From a survey of the whole field of operations it is apparent that whatever disasters our arms may have suffered at particular points, a great advance has been made since the commencement of the war. The Union forces are now in the field under able commanders, stronger than ever resolute, and eager to be led against the enemy, to crush the rebellion by a vigorous campaign. The Armies of the Potomac and of the West stand ready to vie with each other in dealing the quickest and heaviest blows against the enemy. Taught by experience of the ruin of inaction and the hazard of delay, a spirit of earnest activity seems now to pervade the army of the United States beyond what has ever been exhibited. Under the calls of July and August there are already in the field over four hundred and twenty thousand new troops, of which three hundred and ninety nine thousand are volunteers. Three hundred and thirty-two thousand of these have volunteered for three years.

White's Fever and Ague Drops.—For the cure of AGUE, PANAMA FEVER, NEURALGIA and GENERAL DEBILITY.

This medicine has been used in private practice for many years with great success. Indeed, in no instance has it failed to effect a speedy cure, in Ague especially one bottle having been found sufficient in most cases and in none are more than two Bottles required.

Any number of testimonials could be given to verify these statements, but the proprietor prefers relying upon the merits of the medicine alone. A cure is guaranteed, in every case [illegible].

Prepared only by ROBERT WHITE, Chemist and Druggist, Main street, Placerville and Broadway, Upper Placerville. For sale by all respectable Druggists throughout the State.

White's Balsam.—This famous remedy for [illegible], has reached a distinction and popularity far beyond any other like medicine before the public. The certificates from Physicians and Medical Pr[illegible], are a sure guaranty for the superiority and efficacy of this medicine.

General Agents for the Pacific Coast,
REDINGTON & CO.,

White's Patent Lever Trusses.—These instruments are recommended to the public as the best ever invented. The principle is new and different from any other. The Pad works over a Knuckle giving it a free and direct UPWARD motion, thus being able to support the rupture with half the pressure required by other trusses. The pain consequent upon heavy pressure is avoided.

These instruments will not rust and are the lightest and most cleanly of all [illegible]. They can be worn with pleasure. Many persons have been cured of ruptures of several years standing.

SEWING MACHINES

ARE UNEQUALLED BY ANY FOR

BEAUTY AND SIMPLICITY OF CONSTRUCTION

AND

Efficiency in Working.

A GOOD SEWING MACHINE

SHOULD BE WELL MADE, simple in its construction, and easily kept in order; should make a tight lock stitch, alike on both sides of the material, and should sew all kinds of materials that can be sewed.

It should be able to sew cotton thread or silk directly from the spool, and to sew from coarse to fine and from thick to thin with rapidity and without changing the tension. It should also be able to make the tension greater or less on both the under and upper threads at will, uniformly, and should have a straight needle, curved ones being liable to break.

The needle should have perpendicular motion—this is absolutely necessary for heavy work.

It should be able to hem with a binder, hem with a hemmer, should stitch, fell, run and gather, and should be always ready to work.

It should be capable of using the same size thread on both sides of the work, and of using different colored thread on the under and upper sides to correspond with any two colors of cloth to be united.

It should be able to make a long, or short stitch, and to fasten off the seam and commence sewing tightly at the first stitch and to run easily, and make but little noise.

It should have a wheel feed; no others are in constant contact with the work.

It should not be liable to get out of order, neither should it require a screw driver or wrench to set the needle.

It should not be liable to oil the operator's dress.

It should not form a ridge on the under side nor ravel.

Marrying a Farmer

[illegible] Arthur [illegible] sweet [illegible] Nelly [illegible] her pi[illegible] She was [illegible] instrument she [illegible] bird [illegible] Arthur [illegible] for one [illegible] letter [illegible] she [illegible] Nelly [illegible] letter [illegible] of [illegible] pleasant [illegible] happy home. But, oh [illegible] lonely [illegible] sure. But Amy [illegible] certainly enjoys it [illegible] not believe that she needs me [illegible] are both as contented as two kittens [illegible] shall not stay long, etc. All this amused her mother, for she had been reared in the country, and had no fears for her practical Amy when she consigned her to the keeping of Henry Kingsley.

But weeks passed away and still Nelly lingered in her sister's beautiful home. She had ceased to be afraid of cows, and chickens were becoming pets with her. She went with her sister to visit all the tenant houses, conversed with the parents, told the children stories, until all united in declaring that "the beautiful city lady was not one bit proud." The brother sometimes accompanied them in their rambles, opening gates, letting down bars, and carrying parcels, and usually returned a perfect mountain of flowers, plucked by the hands of his companions. With Amy he was always gay, laughing and social, coaxing her into grapevine tangles and blackberry thicket after bird's nests or violets, and then after making merry at her plight, taking her in his great, strong arms and placing her on the open ground. But with Nelly he was always reserved, and sometimes just a little abrupt. He never sought her society, and if they chanced to be left alone, he was coldly polite. And yet there were times when she was conversing with his brother that she would look up and find his great, earnest eyes fixed upon her, and her heart would thrill like a flower with a humming bird in its bosom, and then with one of his abrupt movements he would turn away, chirping to the canary, or pulling Bounce's ears, or, perhaps, he would go and tease sister Amy awhile. Mr. Kingsley, the elder, was proud of his handsome brother, and knowing his passionate love of beauty, wondered much that he did not seem more attracted to the beautiful Nelly. That she was a dear good girl he was sure, and their evident dislike to each other puzzled and even pained him. In the presence of others—and they had many visiters while Nelly was there—they were studiously polite, but in the family circle, Arthur, at least, was sarcastic.

But a message came to Nelly recalling her home for a visit to the sea side.

"Oh! if you could only go with us, as in the olden times, Amy! I declare, Henry, I am afraid some dreadful punishment will be inflicted upon you for taking Amy from us," and tears came in her eyes and color in her cheek.

"What can it be, little sister? I have had nothing but blessings since I took her and last, though not least, has been your visit."

"Thank you. And that reminds me of the way the punishment is to come. I shall be an old maid, and come and live with you, cats, parrots and all."

"What! on a farm, Nelly, where you would be buried alive?"

"Don't sister, please! I am ashamed of all those silly speeches. Your home is a perfect paradise, and I could stay here with you, Amy, forever and not be lonely. And then, I did not know of the pleasant friends you have all around you."

Arthur seemed to be reading, but the leaf he was turning trembled in his fingers strangely. Nelly was to go to the cars the next morning, and toward evening she went out to see her pets once more. She took some bread crumbs and salt and made her way to the chicken coop. But the careful mother had tucked her large family nicely away to sleep, and gave a spiteful little chir-r-r, as Nelly offered the crumbs.

"This is the way," she said bitterly—"And they will all forget me as soon as I am gone." But her heart warmed up again as her little white friends, the lambs, came running to meet her, rubbing against her, and eating salt from the dish in her hand. "Good by!" said she, patting their soft heads. "You will not forget me if all the rest do!" and turning to go she found herself face to face with Arthur Kingsley.

It was the first time that he had ever sought her, and she stood embarassed and confused.

"Pardon me," he said gently, "if I intrude, but the dew is falling. Here is your shawl. Will you permit me?" And he laid the shawl carelessly. Why did Nelly feel weak and faint, for an instant, as those hands lingered about the duty they were performing?

"And he heard me talking, like a baby to those lambs," she thought as she turned to go.

She took his proffered arm, and they returned by a more circuitous route than she had come. Twilight was deepening into darkness, as they stood by the hall door.—But few words had been spoken by either, but now Arthur said, while his arm tightened on the little hand, "Will you not visit the garden as well as your pets?" Nelly looked up. Was he teasing her about the lambs? But no, those eyes were earnest now. She made no reply, she dare not trust her voice, but walked as he led to a garden chair near the fountain. She was glad he had selected that chair, for the thrill of the water as it fell in the marble basin, broke a silence that was becoming painful.

"And you leave us to morrow? Do you regret it, just a little, or were you jesting when you said you could stay here for Amy's sake?" She did not answer. "May I sit by you while I tell you a story?" he asked. She made room for him by her side, and he began.

"I am a farmer by birth and education. This farm with all its broad acres belonged to my father, and his father before him.—When our father died it was left to Henry and [illegible] with the [illegible] that it should [illegible] while we lived [illegible] both love [illegible] But [illegible] She [illegible] money. But I loved you, Nelly, from the first time I saw you [illegible] at the chain which [illegible] since you came. And [illegible] when [illegible] what you did, I was tempted to [illegible]. Will you come for my sake—[illegible] Nelly [illegible] own sweet wife, and he [illegible] never loved before."

For an instant nothing was heard but the fountain, and then a little hand was laid shyly in his, and she answered in words so low that no one but a lover could have been sure of them, "I will come, Arthur, for your sake."

As they stood in the hall Nelly whispered, "Don't tell Henry and Amy now, for they will tease me."

"My [illegible]," and he stopped for the first kiss from the lips of his betrothed.

Arthur followed her to the sea side, where he had no difficulty in obtaining the consent of the parents to the union. The coming spring saw Nelly a loving wife in a dwelling that had sprung up as if by magic, nearly opposite the one occupied by her sister. And if she reads this story she will laugh as she recalls her positive assertion: "I WILL NEVER MARRY A FARMER."

STRENGTH OF THE UNION ARMY.—The Philadelphia Press of Nov. 7th says:

The present total effective strength of our armies—by which we mean the force actually in the field—has been estimated to be about 700,000 men in round numbers. At the first [illegible] the year there were under arms [illegible] volunteers [illegible] making a total of [illegible] by the President [illegible] in accordance with the provisions of the Act of Congress [illegible] but little [illegible] military efficiency. The first call for [illegible] troops [illegible] would seem did little more than fill up the regiments that had been depleted by the casualties of the camp and the field. Before we had really achieved any grand victory commensurate with our expenditure of blood and treasure, our hospitals were filled up, and constant appeals were made to our philanthropy in behalf of the sick and wounded. Perhaps [illegible] desertion in a [illegible] decimating process, for our hotels and prominent thoroughfares were constantly thronged with gaily uniformed officers, apparently in good health and with no valid excuse for their neglect of duty. Assuming that the second call for 300,000 men has been fully answered, therefore, it would hardly raise the numerical strength of the army above [illegible] men, from which the large number of those who, after a few months trial, would be found unable to endure the fatigue and exposure of camp life would still have to be deducted. But in reality we cannot assume that the last call of Lincoln has been answered [illegible] the troops at the disposal of the War Department. We have probably 10,000 of these men encamped in the vicinity of this city, and not only are they unfit owing to lack of discipline for active service, but they have yet to be provided with arms and clothing. At several other points in the State camps of equal size have been established, and as yet we have no assurance that they may not be converted into winter quarters. True, within the last three months many thousands of troops not only from this State, but from the North and East, have been sent southward, but a great portion of them have been required to occupy the [illegible] Washington, which even now are insufficiently garrisoned when we consider their extent and important character. In view of these facts the estimate which places our total fighting force at 700,000 men is probably very near the truth. The total sounds grandly [illegible] but when we recollect that Gen. McClellan along the base of the Blue Ridge, Gen. Sigel at Fairfax, Gen. Rosekrans in Kentucky, Gen. Pope in the North west, Gen. Curtis in Arkansas, Gen. Grant at Corinth, Gen. Butler at New Orleans and Gen. Brannan at Port Royal, each have a claim upon this total, we cannot wonder that it has made such apparently slow progress towards vanquishing the most formidable rebellion the world has ever seen.

THRILLING STATEMENT.—D. G. F. McDonald is the author of a book on British Columbia and Vancouver Island. The Colonist says he is the "Greatest Liar of the Age," and quotes this paragraph from his book, to prove it:

As may be supposed, the state of society is low in the extreme, and life and property are far from secure. Night and day bands of murderous looking ruffians prowl about and commit the most atrocious robberies. Indeed no account of the discomfort and crimes encountered at the gold fields, however exaggerated, can come near the reality. No man thinks of moving from his tent by night or by day, without every barrel of his revolver charged and ready for use. At the British Columbian mines, as at all others, the miner dare not lie down at night without a deadly weapon at his side, and a companion on the watch to guard him from murder and robbery. Thus they work and watch and sleep and live in constant dread of death. Some have attached to their treasury box dogs of the fiercest kind, to whom human blood is more than palatable. At the darkest hour of night the agonizing shriek and the muffled cry is heard of some poor wretch who is gagged and murdered. But you dare not interfere unless you desire yourself to be shot, and to have your tent sacked. Even in the broad light of day from hiding places in the clefts of rocks, from the eternal snows of the Rocky Mountains, with no witness but the all seeing eye of God, have ascended many a cry from lips which never opened more.

The President's Message was telegraphed to the Yreka Journal from Sacramento.

Marrying a Farmer.

[illegible] Arthur [illegible] Nelly [illegible] she was [illegible] up [illegible] triumph [illegible] she surprised [illegible] but [illegible] was not sparing [illegible] Arthur made no comment [illegible] apt to think her too one [illegible] P [illegible] she slept that night Nelly wrote a letter to her mother, telling her of "A pleasant and happy home. But, oh so lonely! I could not live here. I'm sure. But Amy certainly enjoys it. I do not believe that she needs me, but. They are both as contented as two kittens. I shall not stay long, etc." All this amused her mother, for she had been reared in the country, and had no fears for her practical Amy, when she consigned her to the keeping of Henry Kingsley.

But weeks passed away, and still Nelly lingered in her sister's beautiful home. She had ceased to be afraid of cows, and chickens were becoming pets with her. She went with her sister to visit all the tenant houses, conversed with the parents, told the children stories, until all united in declaring that "the beautiful city lady was not one bit proud." The brother sometimes accompanied them in their rambles, opening gates, letting down bars, and carrying parcels, and usually returned a perfect mountain of flowers, plucked by the hands of his companions. With Amy he was always gay, laughing and social, coaxing her into grapevine tangles and blackberry thickets after bird's nests or violets; and then, after making merry at her plight, taking her in his great, strong arms and placing her on the open ground. But with Nelly he was always reserved, and sometimes just a little abrupt. He never sought her society, and if they chanced to be left alone, he was coldly polite. And yet, there were times, when she was conversing with his brother, that she would look up, and find his great, earnest eyes fixed upon her, and her heart would thrill like a flower with a humming bird in its bosom, and then, with one of his abrupt movements, he would turn away, chirping to the canary, or pulling Bounce's ears, or, perhaps, he would go and tease sister Amy awhile. Mr Kingsley, the elder, was proud of his handsome brother, and knowing his passionate love of beauty, wondered much that he did not seem more attracted to the beautiful Nelly. That she was a dear good girl he was sure, and their evident dislike to each other puzzled and even pained him. In the presence of others—and they had many visitors while Nelly was there—they were studiously polite, but in the family circle, Arthur, at least, was sarcastic.

But a message came to Nelly, recalling her home for a visit to the sea side.

"Oh! if you could only go with us, as in the olden times, Amy. I declare, Henry, I am afraid some dreadful punishment will be inflicted upon you for taking Amy from us," and tears came in her eyes and color in her cheek.

"What can it be, little sister? I have had nothing but blessings since I took her, and last, though not least, has been your visit."

"Thank you. And that reminds me of the way the punishment is to come. I shall be an old maid, and come and live with you, cats, parrots and all."

"What! on a farm, Nelly, where you would be buried alive?"

"Don't sister, please! I am ashamed of all those silly speeches. Your home is a perfect paradise, and I could stay here with you, Amy, forever and not be lonely. And then, I did not know of the pleasant friends you have all around you."

Arthur seemed to be reading, but the leaf he was turning trembled in his fingers strangely. Nelly was to go to the cars the next morning, and toward evening she went out to see her pets once more. She took some bread crumbs and salt, and made her way to the chicken coop. But the careful mother had tucked her large family nicely away to sleep, and gave a spiteful little chir-r-r, as Nelly offered the crumbs.

"This is the way," she said bitterly—"And they will all forget me as soon as I am gone." But her heart warmed up again as her little white friends, the lambs, came running to meet her, rubbing against her, and eating salt from the dish in her hand. "Good bye!" said she, patting their soft heads. "You will not forget me if all the rest do?" and turning to go she found herself face to face with Arthur Kingsley.

It was the first time that he had ever sought her, and she stood embarrassed and confused.

"Pardon me," he said gently, "if I intrude; but the dew is falling. Here is your shawl. Will you permit me?" And he laid the shawl carelessly. Why did Nelly feel weak and faint, for an instant, as those hands lingered about the duty they were performing?

"And he heard me talking, like a baby, to those lambs," she thought, as she turned to go.

She took his proffered arm, and they returned by a more circuitous route than she had come. Twilight was deepening into darkness, as they stood by the hall door.—But few words had been spoken by either, but now Arthur said, while his arm tightened on the little hand, "Will you not visit the garden as well as your pets?" Nelly looked up. Was he teasing her about the lambs? But no, those eyes were earnest now. She made no reply, she dare not trust her voice, but walked as he led to a garden chair near the fountain. She was glad he had selected that chair, for the thrill of the water, as it fell in the marble basin, broke a silence that was becoming painful.

"And you leave us to-morrow? Do you regret it, just a little, or were you jesting when you said you could stay here for Amy's sake?" She did not answer. "May I sit by you while I tell you a story?" he asked. She made room for him by her side, and he began.

"I am a farmer by birth and education. This farm with all its broad acres, belonged to my father, and his father before him.—When our father died it was left to Henry [illegible] with the injunction that it should [illegible] from our hands while we lived [illegible] for us both [illegible] When Henry brought his [illegible] to hear [illegible] But I shall [illegible] she [illegible] all so happy. She [illegible] country and [illegible] when you came [illegible] money. But I loved you Nelly from the first time I saw you, and I have been tugging at the chain which held me ever since you came. And to-day, when you said what you did, I was captive to that act. Will you come for my sake—for my love, Nelly—be my own sweet wife, and be loved as woman was never loved before."

For an instant nothing was heard but the fountain, and then a little hand was laid softly on his, and she answered in words so low that no one but a lover could have been sure of them, "I will come, Arthur, for your sake."

As they stood in the hall, Nelly whispered, "Don't tell Henry and Amy now, for they will tease me."

"I'll pay them," and he stopped for the first kiss from the lips of his betrothed.

Arthur followed her to the sea side, where he had no difficulty in obtaining the consent of the parents to the union. The coming spring saw Nelly a loving wife in a dwelling that had sprung up as if by magic, nearly opposite the one occupied by her sister. And if she reads this story she will laugh, as she recalls her positive assertion, "I WILL NEVER MARRY A FARMER!"

STRENGTH OF THE UNION ARMY.—The Philadelphia Press of Nov 7th says:

The present total effective strength of our armies—by which we mean the force actually in the field—has been estimated to be about 700,000 men in round numbers. At the first of the year there were [illegible] volunteers and 20 [illegible] regulars, making a total of [illegible] so that [illegible] President [illegible] in accordance with the provisions of the Act of Congress, empowering him to call out the [illegible] half a million of men [illegible] but little to our military efficiency. The first call for 300,000 troops [illegible] little more than fill up the regiments that had been depleted by the casualties of the camp and the field. Before we had really achieved any grand victory commensurate with our expenditure of blood and treasure, our hospitals were filled up, and constant appeals were made to our philanthropy on behalf of the sick and wounded. Perhaps, too, desertion in a mild form helped along the decimating process, for our [illegible] at [illegible] prominent thoroughfares were constantly thronged with gaily uniformed officers, apparently in good health, and with no valid excuse for their neglect of duty. Assuming that the second call for 300,000 men has been fully answered, therefore, it could hardly raise the numerical strength of the army above 900,000 men, from which the large number of those who, after a few months trial, would be found unable to endure the fatigue and exposure of camp life would still have to be deducted. But in reality we cannot assume that the last call of Lincoln has been answered so as to place the troops at the disposal of the War Department. We have probably 10,000 of these men encamped in the vicinity of this city, and not only are they unfit owing to lack of discipline for active service, but they have yet to be provided with arms and clothing. At several other points in the State, camps of equal size have been established, and as yet we have no assurance that they may not be converted into winter quarters. True within the last three months many thousands of troops not only from this State, but from the North and East, have been sent southward, but a great portion of them have been required to occupy the [illegible] of Washington, which even now is [illegible] garrisoned, which we consider their extent and importance. In view of these facts the estimate which places our total fighting force at 700,000 men is probably very near the truth. The total sounds grandly enough to the ear, but when we recollect that Gen. McClellan alone, the base of the Blue Ridge, Gen Sigel at Fairfax, Gen Rosekrans in Kentucky, Gen. Pope in the North-west, Gen Curtis in Arkansas, Gen Grant at Corinth, Gen Butler at New Orleans, and Gen Brannan at Port Royal, each have a claim upon this total, we cannot wonder that it has made such apparently slow progress towards vanquishing the most formidable rebellion the world has ever seen.

THRILLING STATEMENT.—D G F McDon[illegible] [illegible] is the author of a book on British Columbia and Vancouver Island. The Colonist says he is the "Greatest Liar of the Age," and quotes this paragraph, from his book, to prove it:

As may be supposed, the state of society is low in the extreme, and life and property are far from secure. Night and day bands of murderous looking ruffians prowl about and commit the most atrocious robberies. Indeed, no account of the discomfort and crimes encountered at the gold fields, however exaggerated, can come near the reality. No man thinks of moving from his tent by night or by day, without every barrel of his revolver charged and ready for use. At the British Columbian mines, as at all others, the miner dare not lie down at night without a deadly weapon at his side, and a companion on the watch to guard him from murder and robbery. Thus they work and watch and sleep and live in constant dread of death. Some have attached to their treasury box dogs of the fiercest kind, to whom human blood is more than palatable. At the darkest hour of night the agonizing shriek and the muffled cry is heard of some poor wretch who is gagged and murdered. But you dare not interfere unless you desire yourself to be shot and have your tent sacked. Even in the broad light of day, from hiding places in the clefts of rocks from the eternal snows of the Rocky Mountains, with no witness but the all seeing eye of God, have ascended many a cry from lips which never opened more.

The President's Message was telegraphed to the Yreka Journal from Sacramento.
